

How to structure your prompt

Tips in this section are inspired by and based on the AutodeskGPT Cheat Sheet that you can find here: link

Introduce yourself: Describe a persona

It is often helpful to start your prompt by giving yourself or AI a persona (for example, “I am a UX designer / technical writer / content designer). It adds valuable context that can affect the style of the output.

Describe the task clearly

Be very specific about your need. Do you need a grammar and spell check? Do you need suggestions? How many? Do you need a detailed explanation of something?

Specify format

What kind of output are you looking for? If it’s a specific format, include it in the prompt. For example, a tooltip or empty state. Describe what elements it includes and what the character limitations are.

Other requirements

Include requirements for tone, word choice, and style (see the recommended prompt that you can use).

Limitations worth a mention?

For example, if there are specific terms you’d like to avoid.

Include examples, if any

If there are any good examples you could add for reference, it can be helpful to include those too.
